

TALK International Brings Innovative English Courses to Boston

In order to enhance its English courses for international students, TALK International's newest English language school, TALK Boston, will bring interactive technology to its classrooms.

Boston, MA (PRWEB) January 29, 2014

In order to enhance its English courses for international students, TALK International's newest English language school, TALK Boston, will bring interactive technology to its classrooms.

"Our expansion in Boston fulfills our mission to provide a vibrant place for language learning and become the premier language provider by inspiring our students to achieve their goals," says Vice President John F Hayet.

Teachers at TALK help students get the most out of their learning by incorporating news and web articles, current events, and situations they are likely to encounter in real life. Their goal is for each student to graduate from their English course sounding like a native speaker.

Former TALK student Jose Osorio from Colombia says, "I've learned a lot of new things, learned new customs, met a lot of new people, and most importantly improved my English. Thanks to this experience my professional and personal horizons have grown."

TALK Boston is located in the historic 99 Bedford Street building in Boston's Financial District. Classes are set to launch on Monday, March 3, 2014. To learn about our opening specials and to find out more about TALK Boston, please call 617-426-3500.

Since 1996, TALK international has offered English courses and a unique full immersion experience for international students. TALK provides comprehensive programs including Intensive and Academic English, exam preparation and University Placement. TALK teachers and staff are passionate about helping students reach their goals and provide customized programs to suit individual needs.
